GROWING IN THE SPIRITUAL LIFE: This week's topic: Beginning the practice of mental prayer.

The first step is to make a commitment. Begin with setting aside an amount of time each day for mental prayer. It is better to start small, with a manageable amount, rather than setting a goal that is too high, which could lead to giving up. If 15 minutes is do-able, then commit to 15 minutes. If even that seems too much, then commit to 10. If God wants you to pray more, He will gently lead you in that direction. But whatever the amount of time, stick to it. As much as possible, pray about the same time each day. Perhaps you can wake up 15 minutes earlier to pray before the children are awake or before it's time to leave for work. If you go to daily Mass, then before or after daily Mass is an excellent time. Choose a place conducive to prayer, where you can be quiet and uninterrupted.

However, if the duties of your state in life, otherwise known as children, interrupt the best laid plans, then they come first. God understands. In general, if you are committed to growing in your relationship with God, He will help you find the way. Whatever happens, don't give up. If you slip away from your resolutions, then simply begin again. God always gives us a new day.
